this work on the part of the householder or other tenants is the placing of lids on the containers used for ashes, garbage and the like, regardless of weather conditions. If these receptacles are covered with the lids that are provided with them there will be scarcely any necessity for the removers to bang the cans in order to dislodge the contents.

Ashes, garbage and the like will freeze to the sides of the cans in rainy or cold weather, thus making it necessary to jolt them in order to remove the contents. But by placing on the lids, the adhesion is for the most part avoided and at least much reduced.

Use of the covers even in dry weather is advisable for the reason that none can tell when rain or snow may fall after the cans are put out for emptying.

So, let the householder co-operate in this respect. If he will, his containers and likely his temper will last longer.

Warm Issue

DEVELOPING TRADE with Latin America is about to give rise to an exceedingly warm issue in the United States. It concerns the defaulted Latin American bonds.

There are bonds of the Latin American republics in the amount of nearly $2,000,000,000 now outstanding. Hundreds of millions of them are held in the United States. Mostly they are in default. The administration at Washington is anxious for an agreement clearing up the defaulted issues to permit this country to make more loans to Latin America so that Latin America may buy more United States goods. Congress has limited the Export-Import bank to $100,000,-000 of foreign credit extensions, and the administration wants this doubled at least in 1940, and, although it could probably dig up other Old Man" at all. I think they liked it. money for the purpose, it wants the complete consent of Congress.

The suspicion is gaining ground that any settlement will be at the expense of United States holders. It is known that Latin America has not gone nearly as far as it might in servicing the bonds and the thought that United States holders will have to continue being the goat does not sit well.

MAKE THEM EARN IT MANY GOOD duplicate players have an almost unalterable rule never to let their opponents play a contract of one in a suit or No Trump. Of course, if this is overdone, and your opponents get wise to it, so that they can depend on you to reopen the bidding with hands that are too weak, they can profit by luring you into some nice penalties, especially when you are vulnerable. But as a generality it is sound tactics to give them a push at least to the level of two, taking something of a chance on finding enough strength in your partner's hand if they leave you in or double you.

* (Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

This deal got played at three different contracts in a matchpoint duplicate game. At all tables West was the opening bidder with 1-Spade. In some cases this was passed out, and the contract was made right on the head, with the loss of one trick in spades, one in hearts, three in diamonds and one in clubs.

There are plenty of good players who would keep the bidding open with 1-No Trump on East's hand, but none of them did it in this game, Several of the Souths reopened the bidding, however, and profited by it. They doubled when the 1-Spade reached them. It was almost amazing that none of the Norths answered with either 1-No Trump or 2-Hearts. They all

Several of the 2-Club bids were passed, the contracts being made with the loss of two tricks in spades, one in hearts and two in clubs. In two cases West overcalled the 2-Clubs with a rebid at 2-Spades, which got passed. In each case this was set one. So all of the Souths who doubled earned plus scores for their pairs, either through making their own side's contract or through getting the enemy just too high.

If West doubles and then leads Chances are you won't have to look far for the cause if you eat the super-refined foods most people do. Most likely you don't get enough "bulk"! And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

Football Interest in Keyser at Law EBB

Keyser, W. Va., Nov. 21-Keyser high school's coach, Homer Fizer, today said that the reason the Keyser-LaSalle Thanksgiving grid tilt had been switched to Cumberland in a more-or-less last-minute shift was because of the lack of interest displayed here by football fans.
